

February 1 – 7, 2019

Distributed by the University of Colorado School of Medicine

Man in remission has hope for life after cancer treatment trial

“We were seeing responses and outcomes unlike anything we had ever seen. I mean from the very beginning,” says Daniel Pollyea, University of Colorado’s clinical director of leukemia services.

News Channel 5 (Nashville, Tenn.), Feb. 6, 2019

Study: Marijuana Affects People In Different Ways, Possibly Even While Driving Impaired

“It is known that people develop a tolerance to the psychoactive effects of cannabis when they use it on a regular basis. There’s evidence of tolerance,” said Michael Kosnett, Anschutz Medical Campus medical toxicologist.

Colorado Public Radio, Feb. 4, 2019

At least a dozen elementary students exposed to marijuana gummies, police say; mom arrested

“The concerns with marijuana edibles are, they are attractive and palatable to children and can contain high amounts of THC, said Sam Wang, a pediatrician and toxicologist at Children’s Hospital Colorado [and assistant professor at CU School of Medicine], who is not involved in the case but has conducted research on unintentional exposures to marijuana in children.

CNN, Feb. 5, 2019

Hearing to focus on teen vaping 'epidemic'

Heather Hoch of Children's Hospital Colorado [and CU School of Medicine] tells FOX31, "We're creating this generation of nicotine addicted kids."

Fox31, Feb. 5, 2019

Broncos testify at State Capitol in support of licensing athletic trainers

"In the health care profession, it's very important we get held accountable," said Eric McCarty, the head physician for University of Colorado Athletics [and associate professor of orthopedics at CU School of Medicine].

Fox31, Feb. 6, 2019

Colorado has the highest per-capita rate of skin cancer, thanks to sunshine and high elevation

"A good reason that Colorado does pretty well is that it's a pretty healthy place," said Myles Cockburn, co-leader of the University of Colorado Cancer Center's Cancer Prevention and Control Program, which released the Colorado cancer data.

Cancer remains the second-leading cause of death for Americans, behind heart disease, and the leading cause of death for Coloradans. In Colorado, 50 percent of men and 40 percent of women will have cancer in their lifetime, according to Cathy Bradley, deputy director of the CU Cancer Center.

Colorado Sun, Feb. 4, 2019

How cancer care has changed in the last 25 years

Cancer is the 2nd leading cause of death in the U.S. only after cardiovascular disease. The good news is, over the last 25 years we have seen a 31 percent drop in cancer deaths here in Colorado. Ross Camidge, a world-renowned lung cancer specialist from the University of Colorado, discusses recent advances in cancer care.

9News, Feb. 4, 2019

Does Your Skin Affect Your Mental Health – and Vice Versa? Psychodermatology Aims to Find the Connection

“If someone has an ongoing mental health problem, the stress of a skin condition could be a trigger for a relapse or worsening of their disorder,” C. Neill Epperson, chair of the psychiatry department at the CU Medical School, told Gizmodo. A growing body of research supports her assertion.

Gizmodo, Feb. 2, 2019

Coloradans spent \$55 million on childhood diseases that vaccinations could have prevented in 2017

Jessica Cataldi, the study’s author and a pediatrician at Children’s Hospital [and assistant professor of pediatrics at CU School of Medicine], said: “When families vaccinate, they protect their children and our communities against preventable illness. Improving vaccination rates will help to prevent unnecessary personal and economic costs, hospitalizations and even death.”

Denver Business Journal, Feb. 5, 2019

The Danger of Diabetic Ketoacidosis

DKA is highly dangerous for children, says Arleta Rewers, an associate professor of pediatrics-emergency medicine at the University of Colorado School of Medicine and a physician at Children’s Hospital Colorado. “About 50 percent of kids who have DKA are admitted to the ICU,” she says. “They require very extensive treatment with fluids and insulin.”

U.S. News and World Report, Feb. 1, 2019

Yes, Screen your Children for Presymptomatic Diabetes!

We spoke with Marian Rewers, Professor of Pediatrics & Medicine and Executive Director, Barbara Davis Center for Diabetes at the CU School of Medicine. His Autoimmunity Screening for Kids (ASK) program (link) is now screening Colorado children ages 1-17 for presymptomatic T1D and celiac disease.

Insulin Nation, Jan. 12, 2019

Improving Dialysis for Undocumented Immigrants with ESRD

“Providing standard hemodialysis and/or kidney transplantation would allow undocumented immigrants to rejoin the workforce,” said Lilia Cervantes, of Denver Health [and the CU School of Medicine], who has studied the issue of dialysis care for undocumented immigrants.

Renal & Urology News, Feb. 4, 2019

Transnasal endoscopic surveillance effective in children with EoE

Nathalie Nguyen, of the Digestive Health Institute at Children’s Hospital Colorado [and assistant professor of pediatrics at CU School of Medicine], and colleagues wrote that the primary methods of collecting biopsies — esophagogastroduodenoscopy (EGD) with sedation — can become problematic for patients and their families.

Healio, Jan. 30, 2019

Texas Man Dies After E-Cigarette Explodes in Face, Severing Artery

“It’s literally an explosion, a super-hot explosion,” Anne Wagner, of the University of Colorado Hospital Burn Center, told NBC News in 2016. “We’re seeing deep, third-degree burns and almost all of them require skin grafts and these grafts leave a significant scar.”

People, Feb. 6, 2019

Collaboration, Clinical Input Drive Analytics Innovation at UCHealth

“We’re fairly certain that if we identify a pain point in healthcare, we’re not the only ones who are experiencing it,” said Richard Zane, who is the Chief Innovation Officer at UCHealth and a practicing emergency medicine physician [and chair of the CU School of Medicine Department of Emergency Medicine].

Health IT Analytics, Feb. 4, 2019

How to spend your final free summer as a med student

Halea K. Meese, a third-year medical student at the CU School of Medicine, participated in a rural medicine program that her school offers for credit. The experience sent her to Oak Creek, Colorado, a town near the Colorado-Wyoming border.

American Medical Association, Feb. 6, 2019

Former Bronco David Bruton Now Tackling Physical Therapy As A Career

In January, David Bruton was accepted to the physical therapy program at the University of Colorado Anschutz Medical Campus' class of 2021. So consider his story "To be continued."

CBS4, Feb. 4, 2019