As the COVID-19 pandemic continues to evolve, the Center for Women's Health Research is monitoring the latest developments to ensure the safety of our staff and community. During these uncertain times, we are here to support our community.

Continued Operations

On March 16, the CU Anschutz Medical Campus transitioned to remote working. The Center for Women's Health Research continues to work remotely and follow guidance from campus leadership.

Throughout our physical office closure, our team remains committed to the mission and everyday operations of the Center. During this time, we will not host any in-person meetings or events over ten people to prevent the spread of COVID-19 in our community. However, we are still available for virtual meetings.

Update on Scheduled Events

The Center has postponed or transitioned all in-person events online through August 2020 in accordance with guidance from the University of Colorado and public health officials.

Our next Let's Talk: Conversations about Women's Health event will be held via Zoom. The planned topic It's All in Your Head: The Importance of Brain Health will be featured on Monday, August 17.

Together as a Virtual Community

Thank you for your understanding and support during this time. We are here for our community and know that by following public health guidelines, we are doing our part in preventing the spread of COVID-19. These are uncertain times, but by coming together as a community, we will emerge stronger.
