As the COVID-19 pandemic continues to evolve, the Center for Women’s Health Research is monitoring the latest developments to ensure the safety of our staff and community. During these uncertain times, we are here to support our community.

Continued Operations

On March 16, the CU Anschutz Medical Campus transitioned to remote working. As such, the Center for Women's Health Research will be working remotely until April 17. As the situation continues to unfold, the University may adjust that timeline.

Throughout our office closure, our team remains committed to the mission and everyday operations of the Center. During this time, we will not host any in-person meetings or events to prevent the spread of COVID-19 in our community. However, we will still conduct virtual meetings for the time being.

Update on Scheduled Events

The Center has cancelled or postponed all in-person events through May 2020 in accordance with guidance from the University of Colorado and public health officials. At this time, we anticipate resuming our event schedule in June.

We have decided to postpone the upcoming Let's Talk: Conversations about Women's Health event. The planned topic It's All in Your Head: The Importance of Brain Health (scheduled for April 23) will be featured on Monday, August 17.

As more information becomes available, we will provide updates here.

Together as a Virtual Community

Thank you for your understanding and support during this time. We are here for our community and know that by following public health guidelines, we are doing our part in preventing the spread of COVID-19. These are uncertain times, but by coming together as a community, we will emerge stronger.
